Perennial Black and White Used on Riding Suit

By MME. LISBETH

For a time it looked as if the poor horse could "fold his tent like the Arab and as silently steal away" for all the people of the earth would care, so taken up were they with automobiles and airplanes, but there has been a revival of love for the gallant steeds, and many women as well as men have learned to ride.

Women's riding clothes have undergone a great change since the days of our mothers and grandmothers. The only garb in which it was considered decent for a lady to ride in was a very long skirt—so long that she had to hold it up when she walked, and it covered her feet when she rode.

In case of accident it was bad, because the woman rider was handicapped both by her clothing and her posture. Many women were very expert and graceful riders, however, in spite of the drawbacks.

HAPPY REUNION

Worth L. Woodburn, proprietor of the City Cash Market, Caballo avenue and 218th street, was a very proud man Wednesday when he formally introduced his wife and baby son Wilson to a number of relatives and friends.

All Wednesday afternoon friends were dropping in to meet the baby and his mother, and in the evening a family reunion was held. The relatives who greeted Mrs. Woodburn and son were Mrs. Janet Woodburn, grandmother, at whose home, 1501 1/2 Caballo avenue, the reunion was held; great-uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Dinning; Mrs. Helen Gault and son Robert, and Matt Dinning of Lodi Place, Hollywood; Miss Edith Woodburn and Ian and Wilson Woodburn, aunt and uncles.

MODERN CHIVALRY

It would be difficult to convince a certain local woman that chivalry is obsolete.

"Not long ago," says she, "I met a knight on a dining car. When I went in to luncheon the only seat left for me was one facing the rear of the train. Now I cannot sit with my back toward the engine without suffering all manner of disagreeable things, so I asked the steward to find me a seat facing the other way. Immediately a middle-aged man rose and offered to let me have his seat. I thanked him, and he took the seat opposite me. Then he looked at me hesitatingly. 'Madam,' said he, 'would it be objectionable to you if I were to order spring onions?'"
